

Dinky Land Rover trailer (No. 341)

Appendix

These three tables contain the same information, but its sorted differently:

- Alphabetically by taxi
- By date of production
- By relative value / highest price.

Click on the links in the Taxi column to go to the related pages.

The Date column refers to the date(s) of production. Production of some early toys was interrupted by World War II.

The Number column contains the Dinky toy numbers. The old system consisted (usually) of two-digit series numbers with letters designating specific toys in the series (e.g., 40H).

In 1954 a new 3-digit (mostly) number system was started in the Dinky Liverpool factory and adopted a few years later by Dinky France. In some cases toys that were still in production when the change was made have both old and new numbers.

The 1996 $US column shows the U.S. dollar value of each taxi as listed in the price list appended to Dr. Edward Force's book Dinky Toys which was published in 1996.

The ToyMart UK column shows the latest toy values (as of April 19, 2024) from the ToyMart chart of fluctuating market prices. Values for individual toys reflect various dates between August, 2023 and March, 2024.

The exception is the Luxicab prototype models which were sold at auction by Christies in September, 2001. The taxi at right went for £1,528 and the one at left brought £1,410.

The Christie's auction results for the two cars are on the web (Link1, Link2).

Since 2001, inflation has reduced the value of the pound by almost 100%. In the ToyMart UK column Luxicab's 2001 value of £1528 is converted to £2745.26 (applying the average 2023 inflation rate according to the Bank of England Inflation Calculator). This value appears in the ToyMart UK column.

To find the current ToyMart value of any toy, search “dinky” and “toymart” and the number or name (e.g., toymart dinky 278).

In the 2023 $US column the 2023 pound value is converted to U.S. dollars by applying the average 2023 exchange rate of 1.2439 dollars per pound (according to Exchange Rates.org.uk).

The Luxicab models are two of several wooden Dinky prototypes that survive. See Auto Jaune Blog, July 10, 2016 for information and pictures (Link).
